Puzzle's grisly solution shocks friends

Satanic cult of drug smugglers is blamed for Texan's death

BY TIM MADIGAN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

It was early morning on March 14 in the Hard Rock Cafe in Matamoros, Mexico, and the two friends from Tarleton State University were going separate ways after a full night of partying.

Zack Creech had happened across old friends at the club and planned to stay. His University of Texas friend, Mark Kilroy, and three other buddies, had had enough of the Mexican nightlife and were headed back to their spring break quarters on South Padre Island.

Yesterday afternoon in his Tarleton State dormitory room, Creech, 21, was haunted by the memory.

"That was the last time I saw him," Creech said in a raspy, emotional voice. "I wished I would have went with him. I just wish to God I was there. I wouldn't have let this happen."

A few minutes earlier, Creech heard the grisly news that confirmed students' worst fears and sent shock waves washing over the Stephenville campus.

Kilroy, 21, missing since that March 14 morning, was among at least 12 bodies found yesterday in a mass grave just south of the U.S.-Mexico border. Authorities said the dead were human sacrifices of a satanic cult of drug smugglers.

The pre-med student, who had transferred from Tarleton to UT Austin last year, hadn't been seen since he apparently wandered off from a group of friends in Matamoros as they walked toward the International Bridge.

Friends said Kilroy had been beckoned by a man on the street just before his disappearance.

He apparently was chosen at random by drug smugglers who hoped human sacrifices would protect them from harm, authorities said.
